

JOANNA JONES, artist and DAD director

Joanna wouldn't want to live anywhere else

PHOTO: MATT HIAKS KOCH

After 20 years in Germany, artist Joanna returned to the UK in 1997 and settled in Dover. She is a director of Dover Arts Development [DAD], the organisation behind the town's new arts festival, You Can Reach the World from Dover, which runs till October. Find out more at: dadonline.uk/dad-festival-2023

Joanna's local life: 'Dover is a fascinating, exciting place, with the community feel of a village but a position at the forefront of history and politics. I love living here and wouldn't want to be anywhere else.'

Wine and more: 'Vinoteq Wine Bar in Cannon Street not only serves a well-chosen selection of wines from all over the world, it has an events space downstairs that plays host to live music, talks and discussion.'

Café Melange: 'Also in Cannon Street, this is where I head for Mediterranean food – souvlaki, falafel and imaginative salads.'

Superior stitches: 'Whether I want the hem of a pair of trousers taken up or a dress remodelled, the tailor at The Golden Stitches on Worthington Street always does an excellent job, and quickly too.'

Global food: 'The International Supermarket on Pencester Road is the sort of place where you can find four different types of tahini and handful-sized bunches of mint. It's surprisingly inexpensive and there's a good in-house butcher too.'